MAJOR PLIMLEY DIES SUDDENLY AT HIS DESK IN ELECTIONS OFFICE

Heart Disease Victim Was Friend of Platt and Long Time Office Holder.

Major William Plimley, Deputy Chief Clerk of the Board of Elections, former Commissioner of Jurors, and for twenty-eight years Superintendent of the Money Order Division of the New York Post-Office, dropped dead at his desk resterday in the Election Board's offices, No. 126 West Forty-first street. Heart disease apparently caused his

President James G. Britt of the board nd Major Plimley had been very busy their work all day because of the ing election, and at 5.40 o'clock Mr. went out for a few minutes. Reseless in his chair with other clerks ing to revive aim. He called Dr. rank A. Bryant of No. 62 West Forieth street, and Dr. Irving of the New York Hospital arrived about the same time. They found no sign of life. The body was sent home to No. 509 West One Hundred and Tenth street.

Major Plinley was a civil war vet eran and a close friend of the late Senator Platt, through whose influence he kept in public office many years. President Roosevelt, to the amazement of politicians and others in this city in 1903, nominated him for Assistant United States Treasurer at New York, with control of the Sub-Treasury here, at a salary of $5,000 a year.

It was charged against Major Plimley that while holding his Post-Office place he had sold stocks in companies in which he had an interest to employees over whom he had control. By this time the Senate had approved of the nomination and Plimley's commission had been signed by President Roosevelt. bose making the charges threatened press them. The President withdrew nomination, the Senate rescinded its action and Hamilton Fish received the

DIESEL'S FRIENDS SEEM CONVINCED OF SUICIDE

Think His Sufferings From Lack of Sleep Drove Him to Seek Relief in the Sea.

LONDON. Oct. 2 - Although the mystery of Dr. Rudolph Diesel's disappeartice remains unsolved, his family and riends seem to be satisfied that he went overboard from the steamshir Dresden, having been driven demented by his sufferings from insomnia. An extraordinary story was told to-day by steward on the Dresden. He says hat Dr. Diesel came aboard at Antwere at 5.30 P. M. Monday, and finding the the ship would not sail for two hours went ashore and did not return.

But this story is disproved by the statement of two men accompanying Diesel who dined with him aboard the steamer and only left him when he re-tired to his cabin at 10 o'clock. One of these men is George Carels, a prominent employee of the Diesel Engine It is now rumored that Diesel's own ancial condition had been greatly family positively denies this.

A representative of the British Board of Trade has made inquiry aboard the Dreaden without arriving at any con lusion except that Dr. Diesel has disappeared. There is a possibility that the body may be recovered if the Doctor went overboard at the mouth of the River Scheldt, but if he drowned in the North Sea recovery is extremely
